

HOPKINS WILL GO TO PRISON

Leaves Wednesday With Sheriff Bebout to Begin Sentence of From Two to Fourteen Years.

BIDS HIS FAMILY FAREWELL

No Word is Received From Governor Concerning Suspension and Commitment is Made.

William Hopkins, sentenced to serve from two to fourteen years in the state prison at Michigan City for assault and battery with intent to kill Lee Somers, will be taken to the prison tomorrow by Sheriff Bebout. The commitment papers have all been made out and it was only at the request of attorneys for Hopkins that he has not been taken before this.

When his case was lost in the supreme court, his attorneys, petitioned Governor Ralston in an effort to save him from going to prison. Nothing has been heard from the governor concerning the case and if he pardons Hopkins it will be after he has been in prison. Hopkins is fifty-nine years old and is suffering from tubercular bronchitis according to a statement filed by his physician along with the petition asking that sentence be suspended.

Hopkins was found guilty of the charge by a jury in the circuit court here before Judge Blair last February. An appeal was taken in the case and the decision of the local court was upheld and he was denied a new trial. Pending the decision of the supreme court Hopkins was given his freedom, being released on bond. Hopkins owns a farm near Carthage and in a quarrel over a line fence with his neighbor, Lee Somers, shot Somers. Hopkins alleged that he had acted in self defense.

His wife and son were here today and paid their farewell visit to him before he leaves for prison. Mrs. Hopkins spent the afternoon at the county jail with her husband. They have visited him on numerous occasions. The parting today was a very sad one. Mrs. Hopkins is about the same age as her husband and has stood by him in all his trouble.

The name of Wilbur Winkler was unintentionally omitted from the list of contestants receiving votes in the pony contest in last Saturday's issue. He finished eighth in the race and received 97,000 votes.

Postoffice Department Announces Dear Public May Avoid That Stick Taste This Christmas.

TO BETTER THE MAIL SERVICE

Christmas gift givers this year will not be forced to lick their own stamps when they affix the proper postage to their parcels for mailing. The postoffice department announced today that its postmasters and their assistants would attend to that duty if requested.

The innovation is put in force in the interests of better mail service during the holiday rush and is expected to facilitate the movement of the vast crush of matter that will

WANTS SUPPORT MONEY

Mrs. Hazel Andrews Alleges Husband Deserted Her.

Mrs. Hazel E. Andrews filed suit today against her husband William Arvel Andrews asking that he be compelled to pay for the support of herself and child. Mrs. Andrews alleges that he deserted her in March, 1912, and since then has failed to provide. Their child is ten months old. The complaint states that he is capable of earning from ten to fifteen dollars a week and she asks an order from the court compelling him to pay her four dollars a week. Will M. Sparks represents Mrs. Andrews.

BUYERS WILL BEGIN ARRIVING TONIGHT

Two Jersey Cattle Sales Wednesday and Thursday Will Attract Many Fanciers From Afar.

BREEDERS ADVERTISE CITY

Many Jersey cattle fanciers from all parts of the United States are expected to arrive here this evening and in the morning for the two Jersey cattle sales which will be held here Wednesday and Thursday. The Boyd-Dixon auction will take place at the Davis Brothers sale barn tomorrow and the Walker sale at the Jersey Isle stock farm two miles west of the city the next day.

Both John F. Boyd and A. P. Walker have helped much to put Rushville on the map. Both have taken their herds of Jerseys to all of the cattle shows and state fairs of any importance in the United States and they have always come away with a good share of the winnings.

Sixty head of cattle will be sold in each auction. In both sales many of the animals which have won premiums and some which have taken grand championships will be offered to the highest bidder.

COLD TO RIGHT AND LEFT OF US

It Matters Not Which Way the Wind Blows, There Will be Little Change in Temperature.

THE SUN SMILES DOWN TODAY

Lowest Mark of Winter Recorded This Morning and Mercury Didn't Rise Very Fast.

The sun came out of his hiding place today and shone down on chilly Rushville and its equally chilly inhabitants. The dismal aspect of a cold, bleak dawn gave way early in the morning to a more cheerful view as the sun's rays brightened up things and made the atmosphere feel warmer even if the feeling were slightly deceptive.

The importance of the sun's appearance lies in what may be expected in the future. If one sees fit to place implicit confidence in the weather tonight and Wednesday. And it will be fair weather, too, if the official prediction comes true.

But lest any one might lose track of their furnace gloves or put too large an estimate on the coal pile, the weather man unofficially says that the change in the weather will not be great and that very nearly the variety of weather that Indianapolis enjoys today may be expected for the near future at least.

You see, cold weather lies to the right, to the left and in all other directions. Consequently it matters little which way the wind blows for it will be cold weather anyway. In the Mississippi valley and a little farther west the temperature averages about 16 degrees above zero, and even the far south is suffering under a temperature of about 24 degrees.

A high air pressure area is gathering in the south but winds from it will have to disperse the cold air in the territory between before much of a change will be noted in Indiana.

The temperature in Rushville this morning at 7 o'clock was 20 degrees, a drop of 3 degrees from the record of yesterday at that hour. By nine o'clock the mercury had climbed to the twenty-third notch. By noon the mercury was up to 35 degrees.

25 WOMEN PLAN TO ATTEND

Prepare to go to Milroy For C. W. B. M. Session Thursday.

Approximately twenty-five women, all members of the Rushville auxiliary of the Christian Women's Board of Missions, are planning to attend the C. W. B. M. session of the annual convention of the Indiana Christian Missionary society in the tenth district, which will open at the Milroy Christian church Thursday. The C. W. B. M. session is the first one. Hugh Mauzy, superintendent, and the Rev. C. M. Yocum, pastor of the Main Street Christian church, are both on the program.

MOSTER ARRESTED.

Hugh "Mooney" Moster, was arrested last night by policeman Wolter on the charge of public intoxication. Moster was arraigned before Mayor Black this morning and pleaded guilty. The records showed that Moster was arrested in September and had never paid the fine. Sentence was suspended on the charge this morning and the fine due back in September was stayed.

FIELDS LIKE A BATTLE GROUND

Sportsmen Take Advantage of Ideal Hunting Weather at Opening of Season.

WAS USHERED IN YESTERDAY.

Unlawful to Hunt this Year Off Your Own Premises without License. Many Sold.

The fields resemble a battle ground more than anything else since the official hunting season was ushered in yesterday. Since early last week Rush county sportsmen have been making trips to the clerk's office in the court house to get licenses, which are more necessary than ever this year, because, for the first time, the law says the hunter shall not hunt off his own premises without a license.

In many other respects the rules for hunting this year are different, most notable among the changes being the restrictions thrown about the killing of rabbits. It was unlawful to shoot them up until yesterday, which accounts for the scarcity of rabbits on the local market. It is very probable that there will be many on sale the latter part of the week, because this game is said to be very plentiful.

Castav J. T. Meyer, an authority on game laws in Indiana, lays down some good sensible rules for hunters to remember. First, he should not incite the animosity of the landowner. He should not enter upon any posted lands without first getting the unreserved permission of the owner. He should under no circumstances enter upon a game preserve when carrying a gun. He must have full control over his hunting dogs and prevent them from chasing chickens or scaring sheep. He must not damage any fences nor leave open any gates. When he discharges his gun he must be certain that the range does not cover fruit trees and is not in line to damage stock in pasture.

The hunter will find his hunting grounds much diminished when he visits fields which were a delight of former recollections. Game preserves are gradually closing in all of the best fields.

Quail are being reported as numerous this season and good sport is promised to those who are fortunate enough to find friendly fields upon which to hunt.

The following are some of the things a hunter must refrain from doing, according to the 1913 pamphlet on the fish and game law:

It is unlawful to hunt off your own premises without a license.

To kill or to possess, either dead or alive, at any time, except for breeding purposes, any deer, wild turkey or pheasant. (Owners of private parks may kill deer reared therein.)

To net or trap quail at any time or to possess nets or traps for the purpose of catching quail.

To kill or possess quail or ruffed grouse before the 10th day of November or after the 20th day of December.

To kill or possess more than fifteen quail in any one day or to possess more than forty-five at one time during the open season.

To sell or offer for sale, directly or indirectly, any quail at any time.

To hunt rabbits with a ferret at any time.

To hunt woodcocks before the 1st day of July or after the 1st day of January.

To hunt with any kind of firearm

WANTS ALLOWANCE OF $75

Mrs. Belle Vandembark Says Husband Fails to Provide.

Mrs. Belle Vandembark, wife of Moses Vandembark, who was adjudged of unsound mind, has filed a suit against John B. Simmons, guardian for her husband asking that he pay her an allowance of $75 a month as she has no money, says the Newcastle Courier. In her petition she claims that Moses Vandembark has 350 acres of land and personal property valued at $10,000 and that she has been forced to live on charity since her husband was found of unsound mind.

CLAUDE SIMPSON CAST IN ELKS PLAY

Former Rushville Newspaper Man Will be a Scream as "Franklin Four Flusher."

HE MUST HAVE CYLINDERS, TOO

Newspaper clippings of the show, "The Honeymooners," which will be produced by the Elks at Roswell, New Mexico, Friday, November 21, have been received here and show that Claude Simpson, formerly of the Daily Republican, will have a part. He is cast as "Franklin Four Flusher." There is no epilogue which explains the chassis or wheel base, and since he is a Franklin, it is wondered why these terms are lacking. The four evidently indicates the number of cylinders. The fact that he is a flusher is known here, but that he was "four," a short flush, was never revealed to his former friends. All of them here hope that he will get away for a good start without any sand in his gear box and that the carburetor will be working smoothly. They all feel that he will be a scream as a "four flusher" even though he never exhibited any of those talents in Rushville.

MASONIC TEMPLE PLANS RECEIVED

Building Will Set Fifteen Feet Back From Sidewalk—Postoffice in South Room.

CALL FOR THEATER IN CENTER

Plans for the new Masonic Temple, drawn by Herbert Foltz of Indianapolis were received here this morning and are in the hands of the building committee. The building as shown in the plans is a magnificent structure and will set back from the sidewalk fifteen feet. It is to be a two story building. The plans will be presented to the lodge tonight for final action. The south room will be occupied by the postoffice. In the center, the plans call for a theater twenty-seven feet wide and one hundred feet long. The theater will be operated by Walter Easley, owner of the Princess. The north room is to be used for a store room. The lodge will occupy the second floor. The lodge room is conveniently arranged and the stairs leading up to the second floor are situated as in the old building, next to the alley on the south. A stairs leads up to the kitchen in the rear.

SOME KINDS OF BONDS EXEMPT

Paper of All Political Subdivisions is Not Subject to Provisions of Income Tax Law.

LETTER FROM U. S. TREASURY

Certificate of Ownership Showing Interest in Property is Not Required, Department Says.

Confusion, incident to the passage of the income tax law by congress, is cleared up in a communication received by Elam Neal, internal revenue collector for the district, from the treasury department at Washington. The communication explains the provision of the law on government, state, county and city bonds and on bank deposits. It follows:

It has been called to the attention of this office that banks in certain sections are refusing to pay coupons for interest on bonds of states, counties, cities or other political subdivisions of the United States, when such coupons are not accompanied by certificates of ownership, without deducting the normal income tax of 1 per cent., which the law and the regulations of this department require shall be deducted at the source in paying the interest on bonds of corporations, joint stock companies or associations and insurance companies.

Please inform all parties interested, giving the information wide publicity, that the income derived from the interest, upon the obligations of a state, county, city or any other political subdivision thereof, and upon the obligations of the United States or its possessions, is not subject to the income tax, and a certificate of ownership in connection with the coupons of registered interest orders for such interest will not be required.

The interest coupons should clearly show on their face whether they are issued by the United States or any political subdivision thereof. If, however, they do not clearly show this, then, of course an ownership certificate should be required.

THE BEST REAL ESTATE IN THIS TOWN!

Is a good daily newspaper like The Daily Republican.

It's the market place where the buyer meets seller. Shrewd real estate men know that the easiest way to find a customer for a client is to advertise.

They state their proposition and await results. If customers don't come the first time try again.

They know that sooner or later newspaper advertising will close the deal and at trifling expense.

Every one is interested in real estate, so it pays all to keep posted on what is going on by reading the real estate columns.

There is many a lucky man or woman who has "picked" up a rare bargain by watching the advertising.

Advertising pays not only the advertiser but the reader. It benefits everybody concerned!

Unless Your Shoes are stylish and correct, no man or woman is well dressed

You may wear Paris or London creations in Gowns, or Suits, but if your Shoes are not in "keeping" you will attract more attention than admiration.

And if you are as particular about your footgear as you are about your headgear, suit or gown, you'll "discover" this store—inevitably. The place for high class, stylish shoes.

GILBERT M. HITCHCOCK

Nebraska Senator Denounces the "Interference" of the Executive.

NOT BOUND BY DICTUM OF PARTY CONFERENCE

Nebraska Senator Resents "Executive Interference."

Washington, Nov. 11.—The president's "interference" with the right of congress to initiate legislation, provoked a storm in the senate when Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, a Democrat, charged that executive dictation alone had prevented the senate from agreeing on a banking and currency bill. He predicted that the action of the president in applying the lash through the medium of the senate "conference" called for tomorrow would retard rather than expedite banking and currency legislation.

Mr. Hitchcock announced that he would not be bound by the dictum of the party conference or caucus. On the other hand Senator Reed of Missouri renounced his insurgency, declaring that he was "a party man who never drew a pencil through the name of a Democrat. Mr. Reed added he would abide by any decision reached in a party conference.

"Any man who does not appreciate the importance of this question and does not believe it is entitled to the most serious consideration is unfit to serve on the committee," he said. Senator Kern, leader of the majority, tried to smooth the ruffled plume of Senator Hitchcock by suggesting that the affair called for tomorrow afternoon was not to be a caucus that would bind any individual senator, but a "conference" advisory in character, to enable senators to take counsel with one another.

TO REPEAL SULZER LAWS

This Is the Program of the Coming New York Legislature.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 11.—A direct primary bill abolishing every state convention is to be passed by the present Democratic state legislature in December. In addition, the present legislature is to pass at the December session bills repealing laws appropriating over $1,000,000 which were signed by Governor Sulzer to secure legislative support for his direct primary bill. When the legislature adjourns today it will be to meet on Monday, Dec. 1, or Dec. 8, in order to give Governor Glynn an opportunity to formulate plans to effect such a substantial retrenchment in the annual expenditures for support of the state government. Governor Glynn announced that he was determined that during his administration there should not be a direct tax rate except such as is required by the state constitution to pay for the cost of good roads and the barge canal system.

LAYING PLANS FOR SEAL SALE

Rush County Anti-Tuberculosis Society Will Push Campaign More Than Ever This Year.

VALUE OF CHRISTMAS SEALS

Little Holiday Stickers Are Invaluable in War on White Plague in Indiana.

The Rush County Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, along with all other county societies in Indiana organized for the same purpose, is laying plans for an active campaign to push the sale the Red Cross Christmas Seals, the funds from which make the most effective warfare against tuberculosis the state has ever known.

Seventy-five per cent of this fund will remain in local communities for "home" work; fifteen per cent. will be sent to the state association and thus enable it to continue a state wide campaign of education; and fifteen per cent. will be sent to the American National Red Cross.

The mighty power of the modest little Christmas Seal in the Indiana warfare against the white plague is going to prove itself this year as never before. After many years of educational work among the public by health authorities and organizations and by the human forces which have been pushing the sale of the Red Cross Seals, the people of Indiana now fully realize that tuberculosis is a deadly foe and that it can be successfully combated.

It has further been realized that societies for the study of the disease and for the founding of hospitals and fresh air camps where patients can be treated making inroads on the ravages of the plague, the official figures of the Indiana State Board of Health showing an annual reduction in the number of fatalities from the disease.

The Red Cross Seal has been a forceful factor in not only awakening the interest of the people on the subject of tuberculosis, but through the sale of the seals at Christmas time for the last five years a goodly fund has been raised and wisely expended in fighting the plague. The first seals came into Indiana in 1908, and in the cities where they were first available, the public eagerly took them up as a holiday novelty.

Seals to the amount of $4,500 were sold that year. In 1909 the Indiana sales reached $6,000 and in 1910 went to about $7,800. The public demand largely increased in 1911, when $12,444 was realized from the seals and last year the amount increased to $12,838. With the public the seal is more than a novelty, and it is now as essential to a Christmas parcel, to letters and postcards as a U. S. postage stamp, and it is expected that the sales in Indiana for this year will amount to $40,000 or $50,000.

AN ADJUSTMENT OF DIFFERENCES

Has Not Yet Been Reached In Interurban Situation.

CONFLICT OF OPINION NOTED

While the Traction Officials in Conference With Governor Ralston Say That Interurban Trainmen Have No Grievances and Are Satisfied With Their Present Working Conditions, Labor Leaders Say They Are Not.

Indianapolis, Nov. 11.—A statement made by traction officials to Governor Ralston that interurban trainmen have no grievances to offer, and the failure of the labor leaders to obtain any satisfaction from the interurban heads in a plea that they be given a hearing, are the late important developments in the labor situation.

Robert I. Todd, president of the Indianapolis Traction and Terminal company and of the T. H., F. & E. Traction company; Arthur W. Brady, president of the Union Traction company of Indiana and other interurban officials called on Governor Ralston and in a conference declared that the trainmen of the several lines represented had no grievances and are satisfied with their present working conditions.

The governor was informed that the officials had conferred earlier in the day with a committee representing the men, that they had expressed themselves as being entirely satisfied with their positions and that they do not contemplate offering a set of grievances.

Labor leaders insist, however, that the men are not satisfied, and to that end they are exerting every effort toward having the difficulties submitted to the company under a plan similar to that adopted in the adjustment of the strike of the city streetcar men. So far they have failed in all their efforts in that direction.

CAR AND WAGON COLLIDE

Interurban Strikes Farm Outfit at a Crossing in Haubstadt.

Princeton, Ind., Nov. 11.—Three men were injured, one probably fatally, when an interurban car collided with a wagon at a street crossing in Haubstadt, this county. The injured are:

John Wilm, farmer, skull fractured and severe cuts on hands, face and body; will probably die.

George Greuble, farmer, arm broken, face badly cut and probably internally injured.

George Benton, motorman, chest crushed.

The men on the wagon did not see the approach of the car until within a few feet of them. Their team cleared the track, the car striking the front of the wagon. The motorman attempted to stop the car, but could not do so in time to prevent the accident.

Wilm was thrown into the air and in falling was forced through the front of the car, striking Motorman Benton in the chest. Greuble was picked up under the wreckage of the wagon.

ALLEGED FIRE BUGS HELD

Two Monroe County Men Charged With Burning Home.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 11.—Deputy State Fire Marshal Ross has caused warrants to be issued for Dan Abrams and Dan Reed of Elwrin, Monroe county, charging them with burning the Abrams home and collecting the insurance on it. Abrams is said to have confessed he paid Reed $6 to set fire to the house. Abrams had $200 insurance and collected $100 of it. Abrams attempted to commit suicide with a revolver when he was in a buggy with Deputy Ross, and Ross took the gun away from him. Two years ago Abrams's wife was burned to death when her clothing caught fire.

Martin Not to Be Brought Back. Greenfield, Ind., Nov. 11.—Cordia Martin, the alleged bank robber, who escaped from the Hancock county jail when awaiting trial and who was arrested two weeks ago in Litchfield, Ill., on a charge of highway robbery, will not be brought to this city for trial on the bank robbery charge unless he is acquitted of the crime in Illinois.

A Boy and a Gun. Evansville, Ind., Nov. 11.—George Oates, aged twelve, shot and perhaps fatally wounded his thirteen-year-old sister at their home, when trying to play "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The boy had an old army revolver. The weapon was discharged, the ball passing through the little girl's abdomen.

Asphyxiated in Hotel Room. Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 11.—Samuel Kinstle, aged forty-five, was found dead of asphyxiation in a room at the Gribling hotel. The gas jet in the room had been turned down, and the windows and doors tightly closed. It is believed the death was accidental. Kinstle lived at Oxford, Ind.

Despondent Farmer Kills Himself. Goschen, Ind., Nov. 11.—Earl Fisher, aged twenty-six, hanged himself in a barn. He was a school teacher and recently had dropped farm duties for religious work. His widow and two small children survive.

This describes the class of cattle we will sell in their coming sale. Messrs Boyd and Dixon have had the most prominent show herds on the big Fair circuit for the past half dozen years, and they have always won their share of the money. They have shown in competition with the largest herds in the country. In the sale will be animals that have won not only blue ribbons this fall, but some that have walked out with championships; and the best part of it all, they were bred at home. All of the animals to be sold were not on the show circuit, yet I saw two at Mr. Boyd's farm who were superior individuals to the ones he had out. This is also true of Mr. Dixon's cattle, yet they did not freshen at the right time.

You can secure at this sale animals that combine the blood of winners with production. The Catalog is ready. Write to

The Daily Republican

The "Old Reliable" Republican Newspaper of Rush County.

Published Daily except Sunday by THE REPUBLICAN COMPANY.
 Office: Northwest Corner of Second and Perkins Streets.
 RUSHVILLE, INDIANA.

Entered at the Rushville, Ind., Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

TELEPHONE NUMBER, 1111.

Tuesday, November 11, 1913.

Congratulations.

A communication sent out by a member of the state Republican central committee offers much food for careful thought. The letter points out the gains made by the Republican party and the indications of final victory that is seen in the returns.

Congratulations on the result of Tuesday!

While, like every election, it carried with it some disappointments, yet the general result was a grand victory for the Republican party. The party is again coming into power and influence, there is no longer any doubt.

In Indiana the Republicans elected 27 mayors of cities; the Progressives 4; the Citizens 16, and the Democrats 46 on the returns to this time.

The tremendous increase in the party vote and the decrease in the Progressive vote, in practically every community where party tickets were in the field, is the chief feature of the returns.

In Indianapolis Mr. Bookwalter made a magnificent fight while his election was hoped for, yet his accomplishment in the face of a very difficult situation was splendid. He not only has succeeded in placing the party ahead of the Progressives, but he has gained for it practically 11,000 votes since the election of 1912,—his vote being approximately 5,000 in excess of that given to Gov. Durbin last fall, and Johnson's vote being 6,000 less than that given to Senator Beveridge. Mr. Bookwalter certainly merits the commendation of Republicans throughout the state.

Out side of the state the returns from every section are very gratifying. The results in New York, New Jersey, and the cities of Pennsylvania and Ohio point with certainty as to the drift of public sentiment.

The returns in New Jersey, where an active partisan fight was waged show that the Democratic vote fell off 10,000 as compared with that of last fall, and the Republican vote gained from 88,000 to 142,000—the Progressive vote cast in 1912, 145,000 and on Tuesday 41,500 which tells its own story.

Comparisons in all the Congressional districts where elections have recently been held, together with those of Tuesday, show tremendously to the advantage of the Republican party, both in the matter of its positive gain as well as the great losses to our Progressive friends.

The space of a letter is too short to go into further detail, but a casual analysis on the part of anyone will show conclusively that the Progressive party is doomed to hopeless defeat while upon the other hand the Republican party is certain of a brilliant future, if it will take care of the opportunity now before it.

Champ Clark says he lost $15,000 by not lecturing, but it seems doubtful if the internal revenue collector will let him deduct that amount from his taxable income.

J. J. Hill says the country is

It won't do President Huerta a bit of good to go down to the postoffice every night to see if he has an invitation to the Wilson wedding.

The excavators have unearthed the palaces of the Caesars at Rome, but a day laborer could not be persuaded to live in them now.

If these railroad accidents continue, the passengers may have to appoint a committee to take charge of running the train.

It is thought that Huerta would be willing to recognize the United States government if Wilson could be eliminated.

If Mr. Edison is not going to work nights as well as days, what in thunder will he do for recreation anyway?

The New York municipal campaign has passed without any foreign power intervening to secure order.

About all the paragraphers in this region have written, "You can tell by the color of a boy's hands whether he has been to Sunday school or walnuts." This is mentioned merely to explain why we have not used it this season. It is a bit more threadbare than a majority of things in this Cylum.

It takes all sorts of people to make up the world, as the Kokomo Tribune is wont to say, including those who insist on "learning" people things when they can't be "taught" themselves.

The Frankfort Times, which has been a very prolific source of information for us, blames a charming bit of verse on to Harry Eldred, and if we were Harry we would most certainly break even some way. It is quite the habit for quipsters to foist off such stuff on innocent bystanders. Far be it from us to do anything of the sort. Now when the motorman of this Cylum has an idea, he very modestly—but this paragraph was started with the intention of reproducing some October morn poetry, even though there is danger of October morn being frost bitten. Anyway, here's the verse:

A farmer quite keen at invention.
 Painted a picture called "October Morn."

He drove it down through his meadow
 And it shocked forty acres of corn.

What's so mournful as the twang of a porch swing chain?

It might as well be explained once and for all that any person who leaves the porch swing out all winter is tampering with fate. Porch swings are not built for winter wear.

Something to Fuss About.

The future of the salmon crop is threatened, according to a report issued by the U. S. department of commerce, the said department having nothing else to worry about.

The linotype operator yesterday very kindly saved us from brief mention in Strick Gillilan's cylum—it should be explained by way of dashes so as not to do Mr. Gillilan any harm that his first name is not strychnine—by pointing out the error of our ways. We had written—it should also be explained that we occasionally write something besides the Cylum, although that requires some effort, the effort consisting mainly in pounding the typewriter keys, but to be more explicit, we had written that "the fire department was called out late yesterday afternoon to extinguish a fire in the small lineman's house." Of course, small linemen are rare.

IS THE CIMEX LECTULARIUS CAUSING YOU ANY TROUBLE THESE COLD NIGHTS?

Department of Agriculture Says it Will Continue its Activities in Warm Rooms.

HERE'S AN INTELLECTUAL PEST

How to get rid of Cimex Lectularius is told in a bulletin just issued by the department of agriculture at Washington. During the cold days and nights of winter it is not likely to cause much trouble, according to experts. It is supposed to hibernate. Still, in warm rooms it may continue its activities the whole year.

What is Cimex Lectularius? "Cimex," is the name given by the Romans, who were well acquainted with it. "Lectularius" refers to its habits, being a derivative of "lectus," meaning "bed" or "couch." However in Bostonese they are "cinches." New Yorkers refer to them as red coats while in Baltimore they are called "mahogany flats." Elsewhere a much simpler name is given the parasite.

From its long association with a higher form of civilization as embodied in man, says the department bulletin; the insect has acquired a certain degree of intelligence and wariness. It displays unusual cunning in escaping the vengeance of its enemies, both human and animal. It makes use of every possible means not to be caught in the "lectus" during the day, but has no hesitancy in returning from great distances at night.

The pest, says the department officials, displays a surprising facility for concealment and it is with difficulty tracked to its lair and exterminated by determined housewives. Liberal applications of benzine, kerosene or any petroleum oil, is the most practical way to eradicate it, say the experts. Also, a thorough fumigation with burning brimstone helps where liquids cannot be used.

AERIAL TORPEDO FLEETS.

Frenchman Invents New and Terrible Engine of Destruction.

A new and terrible engine of destruction whose function in the air will be the same as that of a torpedo at sea has been designed by Captain Reboul of the French military general staff.

Captain Reboul's experiments with his aerial torpedo made comparatively little progress until the recent discovery of a stabilizing device for aeroplanes by the French inventor Moreau. Moreau was able by means of his invention to fly in a strong wind for over half an hour without touching his hands to the levers of his machine, only using his feet on the pedals for steering purposes. Captain Reboul has applied Moreau's stabilizer to his own invention and is able to foresee the time when a fleet of winged torpedoes controlled by wireless telegraphy may be launched against the enemy's air fleet immediately on its appearance.

It is not impossible to believe that in the warfare of the future dirigible balloons and aeroplanes will go into the air accompanied by a fleet of protecting satellites. Under control of the air men these torpedoes will act as escort to the principal ship and then be launched against the enemy.

Don't Let Your Hair
Spoil Your Good Looks

Take the right care of your hair, and instead of spoiling your good looks, it will improve them. You can't beautify your hair with barrettes, ribbons and such things. Knick-knacks make homely hair look even worse, because the contrast shows off its ugliness to greater effect.

If you want beautiful hair, soft, silky, lustrous and glossy—use Harmony Hair Beautifier, a dainty, liquid hair dressing. Use it also if you want your hair to go into place—in wavy, graceful fashion—more easily, and stay where you put it. It overcomes the unpleasant, oily odor with a delightful rose fragrance. Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. Contains no oil; will not change color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of the more than 7,000 leading drug stores of the United States, Canada and Great Britain, which own the big Harmony laboratories in Boston, where the many celebrated Harmony Perfumes and Toilet Preparations are made. LESS WORK BUT MORE SUFFERING

Season Here When Dumb Brutes, Especially Horses, Are Neglected by Careless Owners.

HUMANE SOCIETY TO BE BUSY

Organization Will See That all Horses Are Protected or Affidavits Will be Filed.

The season is again at hand when dumb brutes, horses especially, in the hands of careless owners suffer worse than at other seasons. Hard work is the lot of the horse at best. Yet the horse is strong, and the cruel injustice of his enslavement is supposed not to worry him. In busy seasons even the most heartless owner must take some care of the horse, as he would of a valuable machine. Now, and for some time onward, many horses will have less work to do than they had in the summer, and they will have less feed and less attention to their warmth than any living creature ought to have, unless the Humane Society sees that they have those things.

That is exactly what the Humane Society was organized to do, has been doing, and will continue to do. The organization was never so strong, so aggressive or so well prepared to keep watch over the whole county as it now is. The horse which some underwitted owner drives into the city of a cold, rainy day, and hitches to a post, rained up to heartless height, and leaves unblanketed will not escape the eye of some member of this excellent society. And when the horse falls under the eye of the society the owner will fall under its attention. He will be told what he must do. Then he may expect nothing better than affidavits and unescapable fines and publicity if he offends again.

This is but one manner of abuse of horses. There are others equally bad—some even worse. And horses are not the only creatures that suffer from cold and the lack of shelter. Cattle are sometimes, though infrequently, so neglected, as to get their owners into trouble. Hogs, those humble quadrupeds who give their owners so little trouble and so much profit, are frequently denied, in winter, that tiny stipend of care which would make them warm and dry. All these, in fact all living and helpless things which men prevent from seeking their natural food and shelter, are the wards, so to speak, of the Rush county Humane Society. Immense additions of comfort have been brought to them in the last two years, and the process will continue, even more effectively this fall than in the two preceding.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS WEATHER

Farmers Are Busy Getting in the Corn Crop Before Another Snow Storm Comes Along.

IMPROVEMENT IN GATHERING

Farmers are taking advantage of weather like that which prevails today and is expected to continue for a few days to get their corn crop into the crib. Weather conditions have operated this fall to cause delay in the annual task and corn gathering is back a few weeks.

Corn gathering, like most other things, has been changed and improved in late years. Formerly the farmer took out one wagon and all the men he could muster. The men, one working on the row the wagon knocked down in its progress, and the others ranged on either side moved across the field in a broad swath. They raced, loafed, talked and missed the wagon with ears, according to their dispositions, and, as a rule, husked less than two-thirds as much corn as they should have husked.

Now as a rule the farmer contrives to rig up a wagon and team for each man. The husking is done on one side of the wagon only, and there is no "down row." As a result at least a third more corn is gathered per man and a better job is done.

To kill or injure any prairie chicken, ring-necked or pheasant, or Hungarian partridge at any time.

To hunt within any game preserve organized and stocked by the commissioner of fisheries and game.

To kill, trap, possess, sell or destroy the nest or eggs of any wild bird, excepting English sparrows, blackbirds, crows, hawks and other birds of prey.

To hunt on any land without first procuring permission to do so from the owner or tenant thereof.

The hunter should be careful to put out any fires which he may build. There is much danger during the dry fall season, when the ground is covered with leaves, to build fires in or near any timber.

Any one who must build a fire in order to keep warm, be he hunter or fisherman, should use every precaution to build the same on a gravel bar or on ground that is not adjacent to dry grass or leaves, and before he leaves the place he should be sure that every spark of fire is put out. The wind can easily live a small blaze into a conflagration. The hunter and angler will do well to be careful in matters of this kind, as long as they expect to enter upon the property of others in pursuit of their favorite sport. Grounds are generally posted after the careless or mischievous have been the intruders.

WOULD TEST THE COUNTY AGENT LAW

Fountain County Council Hears an Opinion From Attorney and Decides it is Unconstitutional.

QUESTION OF APPOINTMENTS

The Fountain county council, determined in its opposition to the county agent feature of the Stahl vocation education law, is making preparations to resist a mandate from the circuit court for an appropriation of $1,500, and will attack the constitutionality of the statute. A special meeting of the council was held Saturday to hear the opinion of Lucas Nebekar, attorney, regarding the validity of the law. Mr. Nebekar believes the law to be unconstitutional. He bases his opinion on two propositions. The first is that if the appointment of a county agent is a matter of local interest, the vesting of the appointive power in Purdue university deprives the locality directly interested of its rights. On the other hand, he said, if the matter is one of state-wide interest, then the law is invalid, because it imposes taxes that are not uniform throughout the state.

The council, after hearing his opinion, decided to test the validity of the law and, if necessary, carry the case to the supreme court. There is no fund available to prosecute such a suit, and the members of the council agreed to obtain money for the suit among the taxpayers of the county.

INDICATES PROGRESS OF THE DAILY REPUBLICAN

New Press is in Operation Today

This issue of the Daily Republican is run on the new Goss "Comet" flat bed web perfecting press, 3,500 papers, printed, cut and folded per hour. Come in and see it run.

The Daily Republican, being a "Progressive" paper, aims to keep abreast if not just a little ahead of the times. For this reason the Republican office is constantly adding to its already apparently adequate equipment. Only a few months ago a second Linotype typesetting machine of the latest and most improved pattern was installed, and now the Daily Republican office has had a new roll-feed flat-bed web perfecting press installed made by the Goss Printing Press Co. of Chicago, one of the foremost perfecting press builders in the world.

The above is a good picture of the press—called the "Goss Comet," and was designed by J. L. and P. F. Cox, former Lafayette, Indiana, newspapermen, who have been designing and building flat-bed web presses for the past forty years. The "Comet" is their latest creation, and is to supply the place between the sheet feed cylinder presses and the fast presses printing from stereotype plates. The machine was installed and put in perfect running order in four days by William Barr, one of the Goss press experts.

The press performs three functions automatically—it feeds itself, prints 4, 6 or 8 pages on both sides at once, cuts, pastes and folds the paper ready for the carrier or the mail at a speed of from 3500 to 4000 complete papers per hour, or more than 60 papers a minute. The machine is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity.

One of our reasons for installing the fast press is because of our desire to give our patrons better and quicker service. Though expensive, this machine will economize time and enable us to wait for the latest news in the afternoon, and then slam it on the press and print the eight pages at one swipe.

When the present publisher came to Rushville thirty-six years ago to take a position in the Republican office, the paper was then printed on a hand press. It took the biggest part of a day twice a week to print the small edition of the weekly Republican.

Later a hand power cylinder press was installed which had a large fly wheel and a crank, and was turned

The Realization of a Life's Dream

(By the Office Boys.)

To no one did the installation of the modern printing press in the Daily Republican office mean more than to J. Feudner, the father of us all. We want to pay tribute to the grandest man in the business, but we lack the means of expression. Perhaps we may, in a manner, convey to you our innermost feelings when we let you in on the office secret—Mr. Feudner is "Pop" to all of us and "Pop" he shall ever be until he has passed on to a place where the continual buzz of the printing press is no more.

When the last part was adjusted and the "Comet" was ready to print thirty-five hundred Republicans an hour, the climax of Mr. Feudner's eventful and useful life had been reached; it was the realization of an ideal to which he has strived for forty or more years. And there is no one of us who can appreciate his feelings, the mingled emotions of heartfelt gratitude and awe, unless we, too, have reached our goal, the pinnacle of life's ambitions and day dreams.

Mr. Feudner entered the press room when the machinist had given the last word of instruction and everything was set for the first turn of the wheel. None was there to feel the tingle of pride that set him to thinking of the days when he swept out the printing office for his room rent, and it was meagre covering that he got. But in those days, as he plied the broom, he dreamed a dream, and today he realized it. He wore an expression of self-satisfaction—and he deserves all the satisfaction he is able to get out of the realization of life's desires, and more besides.

Bear with us, if you will, as we hark back to a quaint German village where a tailor and his happy family lived. In that family was an industrious boy who sought something more in life than by hand. On this press four or five hundred papers could be printed an hour. This press was later changed into a power press by Nolan, Madden & Co., by taking off the fly-wheel and substituting a tight and loose pulley, and was then driven by a gas engine. From 800 to 900 papers per hour could then be printed. This press was later replaced for a better built machine, one that could be run at a speed of about 1500 per hour.

When the Republican office was removed from the K. of P. Building to its present quarters six years ago, a larger and faster press was installed, one with double feed boards and a folder attached. This press printed and folded the papers at a speed of from 2000 to 2200 per hour, but printed only one side at a time, thus requiring double time to print the edition. While this press filled the bill fairly satisfactory, its operation had its drawbacks, the main one that it required two runs to complete the paper.

The new press just installed will take care of a circulation of a city of from 15,000 to 20,000 inhabitants, and it now behooves Rushville to take a spurt and grow up to the capacity of the press.

The equipment of the Daily Republican office is in the front rank of county seat newspaper offices, and with the two Linotype machines and plenty of type and other material for advertising purposes and the job printing end of the establishment, it has come to be one of recognized merit. The fact is, nothing is spared about the establishment to give the reader or otherwise a patron the benefits of a first-class printing product in a country town.

That the Daily Republican is proud of its list of patrons and advertisers, goes without the saying. In each edition will be found a splendid array of well written advertisements conveying to the readers tidings of bargains and the arrival of new novelties. Advertisers are now giving more thought to newspaper advertising than they were wont to do a few years ago. The business has become not one of charity donations, but of cold-blooded commercial enterprise. The man who sets aside an appropriation each year for publicity now looks about to see where and how he can reach the greatest number of people for the money he has at hand, and because of this latest bit of thinking the Daily Republican has prospered, because of the fact that it goes into more homes than any other publication. That the local business men reap the benefit because of placing their announcements in the Daily Republican is best attested by the statements made by those who watch the result of articles advertised.

The farmers of Rush county welcome the Daily Republican with the same relish or satisfaction as does his city brother, and for this reason the paper is a welcome guest in the majority of the Rush county homes.

The Daily Republican, has many local friends scattered about the county—friends who are willing to assist the newspaper in gathering the news. Because of these friends, the Republican is able at all times to gather the news while it is news. The windows to the right of the entrance. This room was formerly used for storing paper, but the press was placed here so it could be viewed by the public.

news force is ever ready, day or night, to hunt out an item of news that will be of interest to the readers.

A special invitation is extended to all to call at the Republican office and see this wonderful new press in operation, which is every afternoon shortly after four o'clock. Visitors are welcome at any time notwithstanding the sign "Keep Out." The press being located in the front basement room of the building, its operation can be watched at all angles from the sidewalk.

Our Linotypes

The Linotype equipment of the Daily Republican is all that could be desired in a small-town newspaper office. All the type for the paper and a great deal of the job work was set on a single magazine machine installed five years ago, but the growth of the business necessitated the installation of a second machine which was put in last June. The last typesetting machine is one of the latest improved, supplied with three magazines so arranged that six different type faces can be set on the machine with but a slight change in the mechanism. The machine also has other improved and time-saving conveniences to facilitate turning out type composition. The new Linotype is used mostly in setting the type for the advertisements in the Daily Republican, besides the catalogues and other matter turned out in the Republican job department.

Points for Mothers

Your Boy's Room.

If you have two rooms to turn over to the boys I think they will prefer a den and a bedroom, the latter furnished with twin beds, two dressers or high shaving stands and one big chiffonier, said an interior decorator recently. The den should contain a broad couch without back, a large table with the shelving beneath partitioned off for reading matter, two large easy chairs—boys like morris chairs better than rockers—a bookcase, preferably the sectional style, a splendid reading lamp and if possible an open fireplace.

As to color schemes, on the north walls use either a golden yellow and rich yellow brown combination—the yellow in the bedroom, brown in the living room—or a red combination. Brown makes a splendid background for college trophies, pennants, banners, etc., and sporting prints, while yellow for the bedroom gives a good reflection for shaving, dressing, etc.

If you use red select a warm geranium pink for the bedroom and for the den a rich, deep red, which will be simply a deepening of the geranium pink, or dry pinkish terra cotta for the bedroom and a very deep, warm terra cotta for the den. And always have a plain cartridge paper when you can get it in the right shades or a fine satin stripe paper which is in a soft two tone effect.

If you use a border select for either the brown or terra cotta wall covering of the den a hunting or riding or skating design.

For rugs use as many skins as you can muster or the imitation rag carpet rugs, which clean and shake splendidly. Have plain Marseilles or honeycomb counterpanes and no shams. For bureau scarfs have plain hemmed strips of linen. Boys hate lace turbelows and ribbon bows.

I hear some mother of slender purse say that this is all right for the woman who can furnish a suit, but when you have only an attic room for the laddie—what then?

And again I say consult the boy. You'll be surprised at his resourcefulness. Here is what a mother and her boy living in a small town have done. She told the laddie of fifteen just how much money she could spend on his room when they moved into the new house. The attic was not plastered, and the boy bought plain tan colored building paper to cover ceiling and wall and make the room warmer.

This made a stunning background for his squirrel skins, high school banners, fishing outfit and all other boyish treasures that would "hang."

He built a cozy corner of old boxes and burlap bags which his mother helped him to rip and dye a warm red. He painted his own floor, and he and his mother braided rugs at night. The girls gave him pillows for his cozy corner, and after he had repaired and painted a huge porch chair they made more pillows for that.

That room is beloved by every boy on the laddie's list of friends, and a certain club of boys and girls meets there once a week, thus saving maternal parlors.

On his bed he has Great Grandmother Burrell's counterpane, crocheted in red and blue. He repainted the bureau and made a tie rack to hang on one side and a whisk broom holder on the other from burnt wood. He has a homemade bookcase, and he and his chum are now building some real mission furniture to finish off the room.

Birthday Candle Ring.

If a birthday is soon coming in your household, buy one of the charming little candle rings to go around a birthday cake. These rings are made of wood, enameled white and painted with small pink and blue flowers. They are perforated with sockets for holding many small candles. They sit securely on the table outside the cake, and there is no danger of burned cloth or scorched cake when they are used. Of course they come in different sizes and cost according to size.

One with so many holes that the possessor of that many years to her credit would attempt to forget it costs $1.75. A group of three small ones costs $2. If only part of the holes are needed to accommodate the necessary number of candles the candles can be arranged symmetrically, skipping one or two sockets between each two candles, and the empty sockets can be covered with flower heads or bonbons done up in little motto papers.

Children's Luncheon Dainty.

A favorite luncheon sweet for small children with dainty appetites is made from a box of animal crackers, one of saltines and a cupful of pure maple syrup. Boil in the syrup until it forms a soft ball when dropped in ice water. Then put a little on each saltine and press an animal into this in a standing position. Cream cheese and marmalade with saltines is also a good combination.

For Playroom Floor.

A good covering for the nursery playroom floor is cork carpet. It is thick and warm, is washable and does not resound with noise like hard boards or thin linoleum.

The Daily Republican Advertising Department

With the installation of the "Goss Comet" newspaper press and the second linotype typesetting machine The Daily Republican is well equipped to take care of any and all kinds of advertising—neatly gotten up so as to tell your story quickly.

The worth of advertising in The Daily Republican is told in the amount of advertising carried in its columns—it brings results to those using it. And why not? We print 1925 papers every day—923 go to the 1075 Rushville homes, 435 to the rural homes on the Rushville routes, with a good representation in all the towns in Rush county and the rural routes operating out of them.

Take a want ad—just last week a party placed a want ad in the Want Column, wanting to sell all their furniture and canned fruit. Before six o'clock of the same day of issue he had callers for the articles for sale, and by ten o'clock the next day they had sold out completely. This demonstrates the fact that if you have the right articles, at right prices, advertised, The Daily Republican will move the goods.

Bert Simpson or Will Feudner will come on a call to help you with the preparation of copy for your ad.; just have the main facts ready and we can help you with the rest.

Milady's Mirror

Sports Help Good Looks.

The best exercises for women, says a physical director in a girls' college, are those that are simply good fun and have no such special object as the winning of a match.

I would not for worlds forbid women to play games like tennis, hockey and golf, provided that they will not take them seriously.

The two essentials of any form of physical exercise are that it should be enjoyable and that it should be rhythmic. If you enjoy thoroughly, your muscles may get fatigued, but your nerve force will not get exhausted, and if the exercise is rhythmic, if it goes with a swing that brings every muscle of the body into play, then the fatigue will be that glorious, glowing lassness of body.

The secret of that swing, of that rhythm, is this: The body must move the limbs and not the limbs the body. Watch a fine walker, a fine oarsman, a fine jumper. It is always the body that lifts and impels the limb. There, indeed, you have the secret of grace in every action of life—you must make a gesture with your whole body, with your whole will.

A great weakness of golf, as of most other games played with a handle, is that the clubs must be swung on the right side of the body.

Instead of correcting the unwise preference we give to the right hand, such games accentuate it whereby one set of muscles (and one part of the brain) are developed at the expense of another, while the unvaried swing from right to left puts the body out of poise.

Hockey, too, has this fault (though its rhythm is more varied and continuous) and has the additional one of a low crouched attitude which cramps the organs and impedes the breathing.

Tennis is some ways finer. This more than any other ball game exercises every part of the body harmoniously. Its poses and gestures are many and varied; the player gets a quick eye, a lightning flick of the wrist, the instantaneous speed of a cat on the pounce, the power to hit with arm and body curled or far extended, and, if he will and is wise, he may hold the racket indifferently in his right hand or his left.

Unfortunately, though the rhythm is continuous, it is jerky, and, though the gestures are varied, few of them are noble—a tennis player rarely looks dignified—while, when the game is played well, the nervous tension (for women at least) is apt to be too great.

Fencing is too fine an exercise to be ignored. It gives sureness of poise, lightness of limb, grace of carriage and a quickness of eye and of wrist far greater than tennis gives. It commonly shares with golf the unwise preference for the right hand (though some are wise enough to fence with either hand), and it tends to overdevelop the muscles of the wrist and arm.

As to horse riding, there is no sport more exhilarating. There is nothing in motion more splendid than the free movement of the brave creature under you, his quick response to hand or foot, the mingled sense of hazard and security, the sense of being launched in air, the flashing picture of the way and the quick whistle of the wind.

But riding may be overdone, even by strong women. The woman who rides to hounds is a fine picture on horseback, but she is not always graceful on foot.

Brushing the Teeth.

In brushing the teeth use the brush downward for the upper teeth and from the gums upward for the lower teeth. By this method the bristles go between the teeth as well as over the front and sides. The teeth always must be recognized for what they are—invaluable adjuncts to both beauty and health. Consequently no pains are too great to secure perfect cleanliness of the teeth and mouth. If there is too much acidity in the system the teeth will decay quickly and much suffering will be entailed. To counteract this an alkaline dentifrice should be used.

If the teeth are yellow or show discolored spots a little powdered pumice stone can be used. It should be slightly moistened so that it will adhere to the orange wood stick with which it is rubbed on the spots. After brushing the teeth an antiseptic mouth wash should be used.

Fat Women Must Avoid Tight Clothes.

The roly poly fat woman, short and dumpy; the very tall big woman who is fatter than she wants to be and all the other types of stout women are clamoring for the costume which will give them long lines. The well dressed stout woman learned long ago that if she would look her best she must avoid tight clothes. She must also ignore the costume that is conspicuous, whether it is the fabric, the color or the design which makes it so, says the Woman's Home Companion.

Soft materials which drape easily, striped fabrics where the stripe is not too pronounced and neutral colors are all things which the stout woman should consider in planning her clothes. Purple, navy blue, the darkest of browns and greens and deep toned taupes are all becoming and appropriate colors for the very stout woman.

Ruth McEntee, Sponsor
For Submarine Boat K-2.

Miss Ruth McEntee was a proud little girl when she christened the submarine boat called the K-2 not long ago. The boat was launched at the yards of the Fore River Shipbuilding company, Quincy, Mass. You see her as she was snapped by the photographer just after the boat slid down the ways. Mr. F. T. Bowles, president of the shipbuilding company, presented a bouquet of Richmond roses to Ruth as soon as the boat was named and then the photographer got busy. Miss Ruth is a daughter of William McEntee, who is one of Uncle Sam's assistant naval constructors. It was a happy day for the little girl and one that she will remember the rest of her life.

Birds Cut Steel Netting.

Few humans have any idea of the great power that the beaks of some birds possess, says the New York Zoological Society Bulletin. The bite of even the smaller of the order Psittaci is an unforgettable experience, and the macaws, the large gray, and many species of the green parrots inflict terrible wounds. The lower jaw is an impressive example of one of the forms of the lever and is limited in the extent of destructive ability only by the size of the bird.

When the large bird house in Bronx park was built, special cages were made for the macaws and parrots in Parrots' hall. The netting inclosing these cages was sufficiently strong to imprison securely a large monkey or even some of the smaller cats.

By steady application, the macaws cut out sections of this netting two and three feet long and from eight to twelve inches wide, affording an easy passage from one compartment to the next. To cut this netting, a workman is obliged to use heavy steel cutting pliers and considerable force. The netting was replaced with heavier material and thus far has resisted successfully all attacks upon it.

Thimble In Sight.

Among games of search this is popular. The greater part of the company being sent out of the room; a thimble must be placed where it will not be noticed and yet be in plain sight when once the attention is directed to it.

As each of the party discovers the thimble he does not give any clue to its whereabouts by looks or actions, but indicates that he has found it by saying, "Rorum, torum, corum," and takes a seat, leaving the rest of the party to continue the search. The last one to find it must pay a forfeit for slowness.

In some games where a small object is hidden there are various ways of assisting the seeker when in doubt. Thus it is said you are "cold," you "freeze," you are "warm," you "burn," according to your distance from the object.

More original is a practice common in Massachusetts, where one of the company says, as the person who has been sent out re-enters the room to begin searching, "So high water," indicating the height of the object above the floor.

The Realization of a Life's Dream

the town of his birth afforded. The desire for the advantages America offered were upon him. The glamor of the big, new country with unknown opportunities had penetrated his innermost self.

Imagine your boy passing out of your life at fifteen years to sail across the seas and live among strange people! He spoke not a word of the English tongue, yet as a stripling of a boy, Mr. Feudner came to America with dreams of accomplishing things—and a dream that never went unrewarded as Mr. Feudner's life does so faithfully prove.

Not a word of German had Mr. Feudner heard from the lips of any person from the time he landed until he reached Fort Wayne. His destination was Huntington. He was about to leave the train at Fort Wayne, his ticket's destination, when he heard two men talking in German. Not since his mother's farewell at the doorstep had anything sounded so musical to his ears. He was told that payment of a dollar would take him on to Huntington.

At the age of six Mr. Feudner had served as an apprentice under his father, but to be a tailor was not his ambition, so he did not hunt out a tailor shop when he arrived. But the apprenticeship under his father served him well, for in the next few years when chances for a German boy were scarce he made good use of his knowledge and made his own clothes.

Mr. Feudner's first work was chopping wood, but the pay was small and the labor hard. He found a place on a small farm near Huntington. He remained there only a few months when the chance at a position as baker's boy was found. This was not to his liking because it offered nothing of worth for the future, and he broke loose only to return to the same trade a few months later.

In those days every business house had a woodyard. Fate so arranged the stage setting that the woodyard of the bake shop where Mr. Feudner toiled adjoined the woodyard of the Huntington Herald which was then owned by John F. Moses, now of this city, and U. D. Cole, now deceased, both of whom later edited the Republican. In spare moments Mr. Feudner, as a curious German boy with a desire to learn, watched the work in the Herald office. When the offer to go to work in the office came, he grasped it eagerly.

Through days and nights of toil, he worked tirelessly and without complaint. He had a vision and today he had the good fortune to see it in reality. His tribulations were more than the average person's because he worked under disadvantages, but he rose above them all.

He soon became an adept in the printing trade. He could stick a line as fast and accurately as the best tramp printer that ever walked a tie in that day. By his keen mind he adapted himself rapidly to the business and his employers realized his value as a workman. He advanced rapidly, going from city to city in northern Indiana and each time bettering his condition. Finally a German newspaper, in which he had just been placed in charge, was sold out at sheriff's sale because the proprietor had lost interest in it. Mr. Feudner returned to Huntington. The country was then recovering from the financial stress of 1873 and conditions were very bad.

John F. Moses had, in the meantime, sold the Huntington Herald and bought the Rushville Republican. While back in Huntington one day, John F. Moses chanced to see Mr. Feudner and learned he was out of work. One month later he wired Mr. Feudner to come here and go to work.

That was almost thirty-seven years ago and today Mr. Feudner sees the fruits of his labors standing about him—a newspaper unexcelled in equipment—for which he gave unstintingly the best years of his life.

Once Mr. Feudner was at it, his employer realized he was invaluable, and he was given a bonus when he had an offer of a better position. The time arrived ten years ago when Mr. Moses was ready to retire. Mr. Feudner already owned a small interest, and he was able to shoulder Mr. Moses' share. Discouragements came often the first few months, but he worked early and late until results were seen.

Within a year after he became sole owner, Mr. Feudner launched the Daily Republican. Previous to that it had been a semi-weekly. The daily won instant success. By his thrift, far-sightedness and careful and frugal management, he has built up one of the best newspaper properties in Indiana. Today, for mechanical equipment, it stands unexcelled in the field which it covers. There is not standing in the Republican office today one piece of machinery which was here when he became proprietor in 1903.

We are reminded, in closing, of a book of favorite thoughts, expressed in the literature of times passed, which was printed here some few years ago. Beside Mr. Feudner's name in this volume was the following, written by Confucius in 551 B. C. and selected by him:

"Love your neighbor as yourself; let reason rule and guide your conduct; speak prudently and manfully on all occasions. Let your example be so set before all men that they cannot avoid an acknowledgment of satisfaction and approval."

Woman's World

The President's Niece
to Be an Actress.

MRS. MARGARET HOWE.

Mrs. Margaret Howe, wife of Dr. George Howe and a favorite niece of President Wilson, has decided to sacrifice four years of gayety and unalloyed pleasure at the national capital for a life of drudgery and hardship on the stage.

Miss Howe, as this beautiful young woman is now known professionally, recently appeared as Marie in a dramatization of Longfellow's immortal poem "Evangeline" at a New York theater. While the part in no way taxed her abilities, she made the most of her opportunities. In fact, her poses and complete mastery of silent expressions were such that many an actress of far greater renown might seriously covet.

As Miss Margaret Smyth Flinn she was one of the most admired and beautiful girls in the south. Her home, in Columbia, S. C., was noted for its delightful hospitality and brilliant social functions, which culminated in her marriage into the White House family a short while ago.

Her husband's professional work as a physician being at Chapel Hill, N. C., her fame as a hostess in that town became widely known, she and her youthful husband entertaining many of the foremost men and women of the day, particularly those identified with literary and artistic spheres.

Miss Howe's ambition and enthusiasm to make a career for herself on the stage were so sincere that her husband and family readily consented to her recent appearance on the boards.

In all events, if Miss Howe pursues her career with discretion and intelligence and does not permit her pretty head to become turned through an overdose of flattery and admiration, it is safe to chronicle a brilliant artistic future for this daughter of the south.

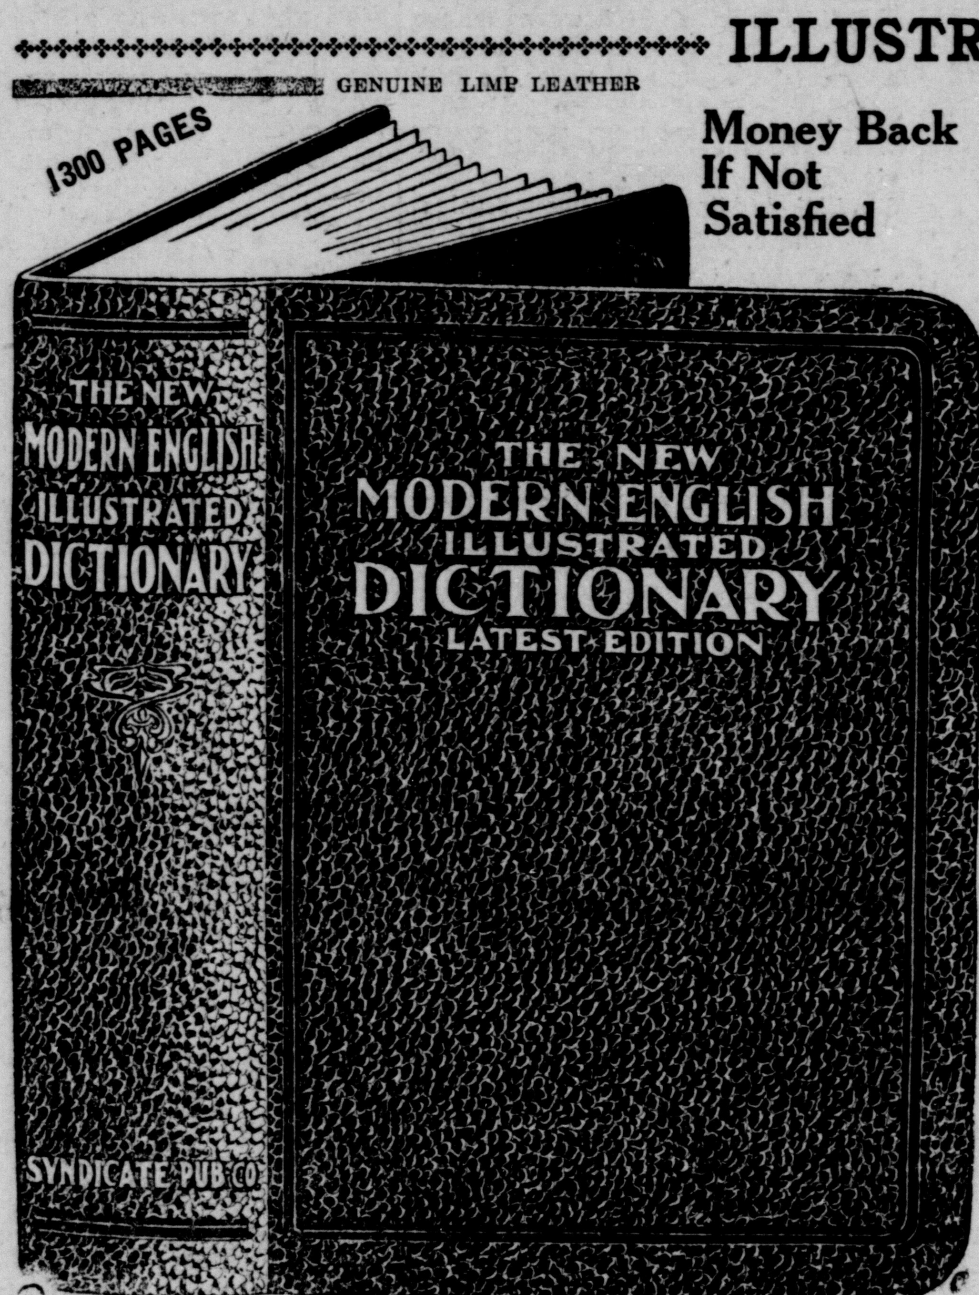

A Poor Place to Sleep.

Traveling in Africa is doubtless beset with more danger than in any other part of the world. Wild beasts, wild men, poisonous plants, storms, fevers and other sickness combine to make a formidable array. A recent traveler in Gwallah, a district in north-east Africa, encountered a new danger. Vegetation is very luxuriant, and when he pitched camp he noticed that a number of dead birds lay on the ground. Before he had time to comment on this fact four of the dogs, which had been smelling around, keeled over and died within five minutes. It was supposed that they had eaten some poisonous plant, but this idea was dispelled when three of the natives, who had slept on the ground, were found dead next morning. Then it was discovered that there was a stratum of deadly gas covering the ground to the depth of three or four inches. The traveler with his troupe lost no time in getting out of that vicinity.

HAWTHORNE'S TALE OF PRISON HORRORS IS TO BE PROBED

Charges Against Atlanta Penal Institution Were Big Surprise.

Had Been Regarded as a Model Under Warden W. H. Moyer.

WHEN Julian Hawthorne, son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and his companion, Dr. W. P. Morton, coming out of the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., on parole, said that the prison was a "living hell" and a place of slow murder and told why they thought so they precipitated a debate that is likely not to end until all officials and employees of the prison as well as many prisoners of high and low degree are subjected to questioning.

An investigation is to be held. Warden W. H. Moyer, the object of Hawthorne's most earnest denunciation, has requested it.

The charges come as a complete surprise generally, and particularly in Atlanta, where the federal prison has always been regarded as a model. The Atlanta penitentiary, while smaller than the prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., was believed to be more efficient, and when a new warden was named to take over the Leavenworth penitentiary several months ago he was commissioned to come to Atlanta to study the details of Warden Moyer's establishment with a view to installing some of the features obtaining there at Leavenworth.

For Eastern Prisoners.

The Atlanta penitentiary is the place to which are sent all persons convicted in the United States courts in the eastern states. Fort Leavenworth is the destination of prisoners from the middle western states. The western prison is at San Quentin, Cal.

Recently, within the last two years, in fact, a number of features have been added at Atlanta which have attracted widespread attention among the advocates of prison reforms. A baseball league was organized among the prisoners, with games every Saturday afternoon, which is always a holiday. A prison paper was established and published monthly under the name of Good Words. Already there was a prison orchestra, and the custom was inaugurated of furnishing music during meal time; also the ban of silence was removed during the hours allotted to the prisoners for play.

Of all these things the public heard until the impression grew that the Atlanta penitentiary was an ideal place of its kind. Then came the accusation of Hawthorne and Morton with unexpected suddenness. The prominence of the two men gave something of verisimilitude to their story that would not have been attached to the revelations of an ordinary convict. They had admitted that they had never been ill treated and added that they were speaking out of no spirit of revenge.

Hawthorne and Morton talked particularly of insufficient and poorly prepared food, charging that men actually were deprived of necessary sustenance in order that a good financial statement might be made. Hawthorne talked dramatically of the "hole" in which recalcitrant prisoners were confined.

Description of the "Hole."

As he drew the picture of this place of solitary confinement it was a hot, dark dungeon where men were strapped by their wrists and left for hours upon the slightest provocation. Hawthorne told of the case of an old, half-witted prisoner whom he called "Great Britain," the name by which he is generally known among the prison inmates. "Great Britain," he said, was constantly subjected to incarceration in the "hole," when because of his mental taint he was not responsible for his actions.

Hawthorne and Morton left Atlanta within two hours after their release from the penitentiary. Hardly had

BOLL WEEVIL IS BEATEN.

President of the Southern Railway Tells of Planter's Success.

That farmers in the territory into which the Mexican boll weevil has spread, after having taken the advice of agents of the Southern railway, were able to produce cotton successfully, in spite of the weevil, has been demonstrated, according to President Finley of the railway company, who lately made a trip through the south.

"The practical demonstration of the possibility of controlling the weevil in the territory east of the Mississippi river," he said, "is one of more than incidental importance. It means that the cotton is still to be the leading crop in that territory. Special attention is being given to forage crops and to corn. Formerly southeastern farmers bought large quantities of western corn for their farm animals. Now there are many who have corn for sale. The cotton crop in the south-east, while not as large as in some years, is good and is being sold at an unusually good average price."

He declared that the general prosperity of the section is largely dependent upon agricultural conditions and that farming in the southeast is so distinctively progressive that there is every reason to look to the future with confidence.

LOSE TWO YEARS OF LIFE.

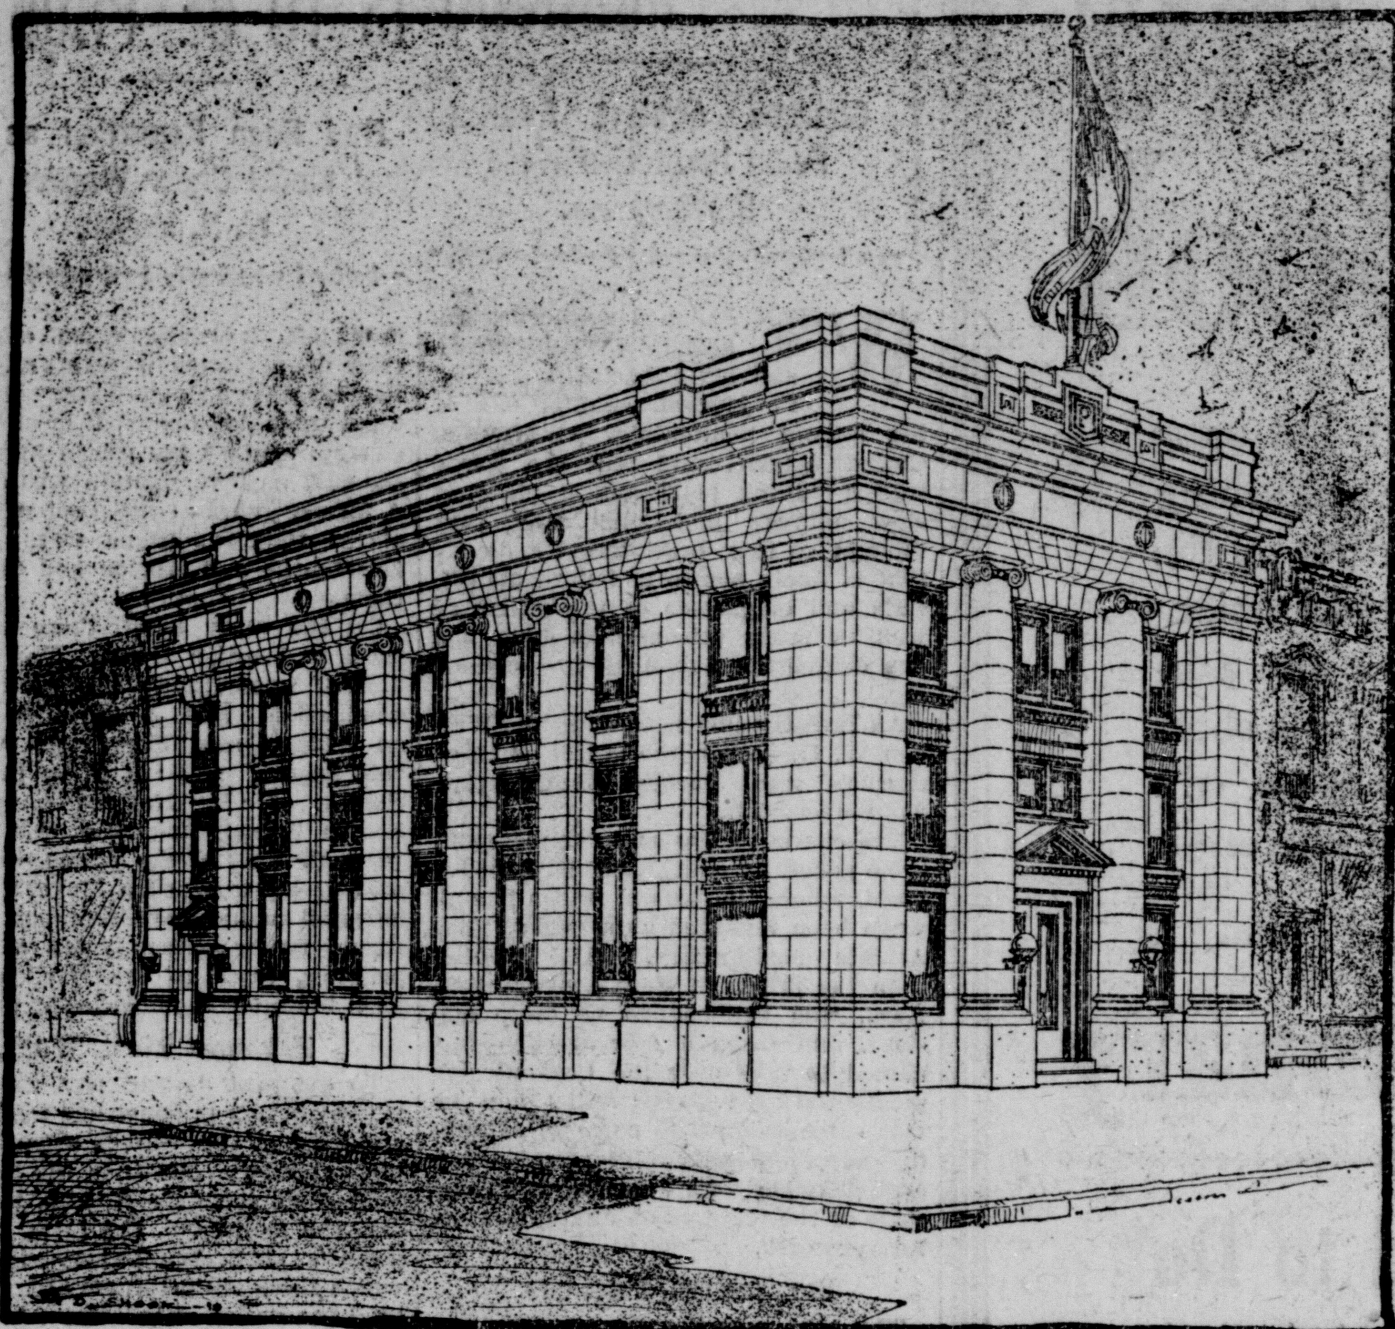

Noted Educators Condemn the Fads in Schools of Today.

Two years of useful life are lost to every American under existing educational conditions, due to the increased fads adopted by schools and made part of their compulsory curriculum. This is the finding of a body of eminent educators, headed by President James H. Baker of the University of Colorado, whose report has just been issued by the United States bureau of education in Washington.

"The great mistake in our education is to suppose," says the report, "that quantity and strain constitute education. Education is a question of doing a few essential things well and without overstrain. The college has committed a grievous mistake in demanding more in quantity than in quality produced under conditions of healthy normal development."

The educators, who, say the bureau officials, spent years investigating conditions, would have the elementary education of the young occupy only six years instead of eight. They would have the student pass through high school and college so as to be prepared either to enter the world at the age of twenty or, if desirous of taking up a profession, enable him to be equipped within two or four years later.

The Peoples Bank Building Now Nearly Completed

Work is progressing rapidly on the building which will be, when completed, the home of the Peoples National bank and the Peoples Loan & Trust company. Every day sees another finishing touch added, all of which will combine in giving an effect of symmetry and beauty.

The earliest possible date set for the completion of the building is February first, and it is probable that it can not be finished by that time. Latham & Walters, the contractors, according to the superintendent of construction, Edward Galbreath, are working to the end that it may be completed at as early date as possible, but they are not allowing haste to make waste, as the old adage runs.

Both the first and second floors will be completed about the same time, so that one will be ready for occupancy as soon as the other.

The ordinary person could not near approximate the amount of material that is being used in this building. It requires a great stretch of imagination to think in car load lots, but that is the unit the contractors use in stating the great mass of material that is being welded into shape to make a modern fire-proof building.

The amount of material used is as follows: Seven car loads of cut stone, two car loads of cement, eight car loads of sand and gravel, one car load of steel, four car loads of tile, five car loads of brick, and three car loads of lumber for temporary forms.

Not one stick of the lumber will be left in the building. It is absolutely necessary to make forms for the cement work.

SEVEN PER CENT WAGE INCREASE

Decision of the Railway Arbitration Board.

73,000 EMPLOYEES AFFECTED

Conductors and Trainmen on the Forty-One Railroads Represented in the Arbitration Agreement Will Receive Approximately $6,000,000 a Year in Additional Wages Under the Award by the Arbitration Board.

New York, Nov. 11.—In the case of the conductors and trainmen of the eastern railroads the award of the arbitration board which has just been made public by the arbitrators, gives an increase in present wages of 7 per cent. The arbitration board estimates that this will involve a total increase in the payrolls of the forty-one railroads represented in the arbitration of about 8-10ths of 1 per cent of the total operating expenses of the roads, or approximately $6,000,000 a year.

The arbitration of these demands was the first under the new Newlands amendment to the Erdman act. Under the law a majority of the board could render a decision and the award was not unanimous. A. H. Smith and W. W. Atterbury, the representatives of the roads on the board, filing a dissenting opinion.

Regarding the argument for standardization by the representatives of the conductors and trainmen, the prevailing opinion of the board was that it must take the adjustment of 1910 as its starting point and could not be controlled in its findings by the argument for standardization, although it might be influenced by it.

In the award the arbitrators say that while their action is not based entirely on the increased cost of living, yet this matter is basic.

The demands of the trainmen and conductors which have now been arbitrated were approved at the regular meeting of the eastern association of general committees Order of Railway Conductors and Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, held at Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 15-19, 1912.

The demands affected 73,266 employees, of whom 19,903 are conductors and 53,363 are trainmen on roads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers. If the demands of these employees had been granted in full it would have increased the payrolls $18,000,000 a year, and even according to the estimates of the leaders of the trainmen and conductors, would have meant increases in pay aggregating 15 per cent. The award is retroactive to Oct. 1, of this year, and will be in force for a year from that time. It will continue in force like a regular agreement unless toward the end of a year a month's notice is given by either side of a desire to change or end it. The Erie railroad was not represented in the arbitration, but agreed to abide by the award. Eight or nine other roads were not represented, but are expected to accept the conditions of the award.

A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, was present when the award was made public. Mr. Garretson was not willing to discuss the award, but appeared to be pleased by it.

"I am bound to be satisfied," he said, "though we did not get as much as we wanted. We agreed to accept the award and so I have to be satisfied."

Daniel L. Cease, one of the arbitrators for the employees, said that the men did not get as high wages on the award as in the west. There were other compensations, however, he said.

GARRISON PLEASED AT CANAL PROGRESS

"Everything Lovely," Says Secretary of War.

New York, Nov. 11.—Secretary of War Garrison and his party have returned from their visit to the Panama canal by the Panama line steamer Colon. Mr. Garrison said that "everything was lovely" on the isthmus and told of a trip through the canal from the Atlantic end as far as the Cucaracha slide in the Culebra cut. He said that the trip through the canal was a wonderful experience, the voyage being made on board one of the working vessels.

"The canal seems finished," said Mr. Garrison. "We went through the great Gatun locks, the gates swinging for us as if they had been working for years; then we slipped through into Gatun lake and finally into the wonderful Culebra cut."

General Edward M. Weaver of the party said he had inspected the fortifications of the canal and that the work was proceeding satisfactorily.

CHAPTER X.

Garson's Noiseless Gun.

SOMETHING of what was in his mind was revealed in Garson's first speech after Griggs' going. "That's a mighty big stake he's playing for."

"And a big chance he's taking!" Mary retorted. "No, Joe, we don't want any of that. We'll play a game that's safe and sure."

The words recalled to the forger weird forebodings that had been troubling him throughout the day. "It's sure enough," he stated, "but is it safe?"

"What do you mean?" Garson walked to and fro nervously as he answered.

"Suppose the bulls get tired of you

Inspector Burke.

putting it over on 'em and try some rough work?"

"Don't worry, Joe. I know a way to stop it."

"Well, so far as that goes, so do I," the forger said, with significant emphasis.

"Just what do you mean by that?" Mary demanded, suspiciously.

"For rough work," he said, "I have this." He took a magazine pistol from his pocket. It was of an odd shape, with a barrel longer than usual and a bell-shaped contrivance attached to the muzzle.

"No, no, Joe," Mary cried. "None of that—ever!"

"Pooh!" The forger exclaimed. "Even if I used it, they would never get on to me. See this?" He pointed at the strange contrivance on the muzzle.

"What is it? I have never seen anything like that before."

"Of course you haven't. I'm the first man in the business to get one, and I'll bet on it. I keep up with the times." He was revealing that fundamental egotism which is the characteristic of all his kind. "That's one of the new Maxim silencers. With smokeless powder in the cartridges, and the silencer on, I can make a shot from my coat pocket, and you wouldn't even know it had been done. And I'm some shot, believe me."

"Impossible!" Mary ejaculated.

"No, it ain't. Here, wait. I'll show you."

"Good gracious, not here!" Mary exclaimed in alarm. "We would have the whole place down on us."

Garson chuckled.

"You just watch that dinky little vase at the table across the room there. Tain't very valuable, is it?"

"No," Mary answered.

In the same instant, while still her eyes were on the vase, it fell in a cascade of shattered glass to the table and floor. She had heard no sound, she saw no smoke. Perhaps, there had been a faintest clicking noise. She stared dumfounded for a few seconds, then turned her bewildered face toward Garson, who was grinning in high enjoyment.

"Neat little thing, ain't it?" the man asked, exultantly.

"Where did you get it?" Mary asked.

"In Boston, last week. And between you and me, Mary, it's the only model, and it sure is a corker."

That night in the back room of Blinker's English Eddie and Garson sat with their heads close together over a table.

"A chance like this," Griggs was saying, "a chance that will make a fortune for all of us."

"It sounds good," Garson admitted, wistfully.

"Well," urged Griggs, "what do you say?"

"How would we split it?"

"Three ways would be right," Griggs answered. "One to me, one to you and one to be divided up among the others."

Garson brought his fist down on the table with a force that made the glasses jingle.

"You're on," he said, strongly.

"Fine!" Griggs declared, and the two men shook hands. "Now, I'll get—"

"Get nothing!" Garson interrupted. "I'll get my own men. Chicago Red is in town. So is Dacey, with perhaps a couple of others of the right sort. I'll get them and we'll turn the trick tomorrow night."

"That's the stuff," Griggs agreed, greatly pleased.

But a sudden shadow fell on the face of Garson. He bent closer to his companion and spoke with a fierce intensity that brooked no denial.

"She must never know."

Griggs nodded understandingly.

Mary had gone to her bedroom for a nap. She was not in the least surprised that Dick had not yet returned, though he had mentioned half an hour. At the best there were many things that might detain him—his father's absence from the office, difficulties in making arrangements for his projected honeymoon trip abroad—which would never occur—or the like. At the worst there was a chance of finding his father promptly, and of that father as promptly taking steps to prevent the son from ever again seeing the woman who had so indiscreetly married him.

Yet somehow Mary could not believe that her husband would yield to such paternal coercion. Rather, she was sure that he would prove loyal to her whom he loved through every trouble. At the thought a certain wistfulness pervaded her and a poignant regret that this particular man should have been the one chosen of fate to be entangled within her mesh of revenge. There throbbed in her a heart-tormenting realization that there were in life possibilities infinitely more splendid than the joy of vengeance. She would not confess the truth even to her husband, but the truth was there and set her atremble with vague fears.

She had slept, perhaps, a half hour when Fannie awakened her.

"It's a man named Burke," she explained as her mistress lay blinking. "And there's another man with him. They said they must see you."

By this time Mary was wide awake, for the name of Burke, the police inspector, was enough to startle her out of drowsiness.

She got up, slipped into a teagown, bathed her eyes in cologne, dressed her hair a little and went into the drawing room, where the two men had been waiting for something more than a quarter of an hour—to the violent indignation of both.

"Oh, here you are, at last!" the big, burly man cried as she entered.

"Yes, inspector," Mary replied pleasantly, as she advanced into the room. She gave a glance toward the other visitor, who was of a slenderer form, with a thin, keen face, and recognized him instantly as Demarest, who had taken part against her as the lawyer for the store at the time of her trial, and who was now district attorney.

She went to the chair at the desk and seated herself in a leisurely fashion that increased the indignation of the fuming inspector. She did not ask her self invited guests to sit.

"To whom do I owe the pleasure of this visit, inspector?" she remarked coolly. It was noticeable that she said whom and not what, as if she understood perfectly that the influence of some person brought him.

"I have come to have a few quiet words with you," the inspector declared. Mary disregarded him, and turned to the other man.

"How do you do, Mr. Demarest?" she said evenly. "It's four years since we met, and they've made you district attorney since then. Allow me to congratulate you."

Demarest's keen face took on an expression of perplexity.

"I'm puzzled," he confessed. "There is something familiar, somehow, about you, and yet—"

"Can't you guess?" Mary questioned, "Search your memory, Mr. Demarest." The face of the district attorney lightened.

"Why!" he exclaimed, "you are—it can't be—yes—you are the girl, you're the Mary Turner whom I—oh, I know you now."

"I'm the girl you mean, Mr. Demarest, but, for the rest, you don't know me—not at all!"

"Young woman," Burke said, peremptorily, "the Twentieth Century limited leaves Grand Central station at 4 o'clock. It arrives in Chicago at 8:55 tomorrow morning." He pulled a massive gold watch from his waistcoat pocket, glanced at it, thrust it back, and concluded ponderously: "You will just about have time to catch that train."

"Working for the New York Central now?" Mary asked blandly.

"You'd better be packing your trunk," the inspector rumbled.

"But why? I'm not going away."

"On the Twentieth Century limited this afternoon," the inspector declared in a voice of growing wrath.

"Oh, dear, no!"

"I say yes!" The answer was a bellow. "I'm giving you your orders.

You will either go to Chicago or you'll go up the river."

"If you can convict me. Pray, notice that little word 'if.'"

The district attorney interposed very suavely:

"I did once, I remember."

"But you can't do it again," Mary declared with an assurance that excited the astonishment of the police official.

"How do you know he can't?" he blustered.

"Because if he could he would have had me in prison some time ago."

"Huh!" Burke exclaimed gruffly. "I've seen them go up pretty easy."

"The poor ones; not those that have money. I have money, plenty of money—now."

"Money you stole!" the inspector returned brutally.

"Oh, dear, no!" Mary cried with a fine show of virtuous indignation.

"What about the $30,000 you got on that partnership swindle? I s'pose you didn't steal that?"

"Certainly not," was the ready reply. "The map advertised for a partner in a business sure to bring big and safe returns. We formed a partnership with a capital of $60,000. We paid the money into the bank, and then at once I drew it out. It was legal for me to draw that money—wasn't it, Mr. Demarest?"

The district attorney admitted the truth of her contention.

"Well, anyhow," Burke shouted, "you may stay inside the law, but you've got to get outside the city. On the level, now, do you think you could get away with that young Gilder scheme you've been planning?"

"What young Gilder scheme?"

"Oh, I'm wise—I'm wise!" the inspector cried roughly. "The answer is, once for all, leave town this afternoon or you'll be in the Tombs in the morning."

"It can't be done, inspector."

Mary opened a drawer of the desk and took out the document obtained that morning from Harris and held it forth.

"What's this?" Burke stormed, but he took the paper.

Demarest looked over the inspector's shoulder, and his eyes grew larger as he read. When he was at an end of the reading he regarded the passive woman at the desk with a new respect.

"What's this?" Burke repeated helplessly. Mary was kind enough to make the document clear to him.

"It's a temporary restraining order from the supreme court instructing you to let me alone until you have legal proof that I have broken the law."

"But it can't be done," shouted Burke.

"You might ask Mr. Demarest," Mary suggested pleasantly, "as to whether or not it can be done. The gambling houses can do it and so keep on breaking the law. The race track men can do it and laugh at the law. The railroad can do it to restrain its employees from striking. So why shouldn't I get one too? You see, I have money. I can buy all the law I want. And there's nothing you can't do with the law if you have money enough. Ask Mr. Demarest. He knows."

"Can you beat that?" Burke rumbled. He regarded Mary with a stare of almost reverential wonder. "A crook appealing to the law?"

"Well, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?"

"Miss Turner," the district attorney said, with an appearance of sincerity, "I'm going to appeal to your sense of fair play."

"That was killed four years ago."

But Demarest persisted. Influence had been brought to bear on him. It was for her own sake now that he urged her.

"Let young Gilder alone."

Mary laughed again.

"His father sent me away for three years—three years for something I didn't do. Well, he's got to pay for it."

By this time, Burke, a man of superior intelligence, as one must be to reach such a position of authority, had come to realize that here was a case not to be carried through by blustering, by intimidation, by the rough ruses familiar to the force.

"Don't fool yourself, my girl," he said in his huge voice, which was now modulated to a degree that made

"Well, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?"

It almost unfamiliar to himself. "You can't go through with this. There's always a weak link in the chain somewhere. It's up to me to find it, and I will."

"Now," she said, and there was respect in the glance she gave the stalwart man, "now you really sound dangerous."

Fannie appeared at the door.

"Mr. Edward Gilder wishes to see you, Miss Turner," she said. "Shall I show him in?"

"Oh, certainly," Mary answered, with an admirable pretense of indifference, while Burke glared at Demarest, and the district attorney appeared ill at ease.

HENRY M. PINDELL

Peoria Editor Who May Not Get That Diplomatic Post.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The nomination of H. M. Pindell of Peoria, Ill., as ambassador to Russia has not gone to the senate. The disclosure of an alleged bargain by which Pindell was to retain the post only a year and be subjected to other diplomatic labors, has, it is believed, spoiled the chances of Mr. Pindell.

ENGLAND KEEPING ITS HANDS OFF IN MEXICO

No Friction Between Great Britain and United States.

London, Nov. 11.—Last evening emphatic denial was given by Premier Asquith to reports that there had been friction between Great Britain and the United States over the policy adopted by the Washington administration in the Mexican situation.

Speaking at the lord Mayor's banquet in Guild hall, the premier, after saying that the civil war continues in Mexico and that the commercial interests of Great Britain call for vigilant care, added:

"There never has been and cannot be any question of political intervention on the part of Great Britain in the domestic concerns of Mexico or of any Central or South American state. It is in no part our right or duty in that part of the world to prevent revolution or to preclude control or even to put a stop to civil war. The utmost we can expect to do is to give whatever protection is possible on the coasts to English lives and property in times of urgent danger.

"A rumor has found credence in some quarters that, at a moment when the United States is taking a line of its own in regard to Mexico, we entered upon a new departure in policy deliberately, or if not deliberately, at any rate opposed in fact to that of the United States and calculated accordingly."

"There is no vestige of foundation for such a rumor."

DETAILS OF THE MEXICAN POLICY

First Is the Determination to Oust Huerta.

HOW MAY THIS BEST BE DONE?

While the Administration Is Working Out a Problem Which May Mean a Crisis in the Relations Between This Government and a Neighboring Republic, the President Asks Self-Restraint on the Part of the Public.

Washington, Nov. 11.—For the first time it is possible now to give authoritatively some of the details of the administration's Mexican policy.

Huerta must go; that is the unalterable determination of President Wilson and his advisers. How this most difficult and dangerous task can be accomplished is a matter yet to be worked out. With this determination as the basis of the president's policy, Huerta's acts as head of the Mexican government will not be recognized by the United States, nor will this government recognize the acts of the Mexican congress about to be called into being. Huerta has been informed of this determination, and so also have the European and other governments having interests in Mexico.

No time limit, however, has been set by this government for the retirement of Huerta, and no threat of force in the event of his failure to yield has been conveyed to him.

These facts authoritatively announced to the correspondents in Washington, have served to clear the atmosphere here regarding the Mexican situation, but they have not altered the seriousness of the predicament in which the administration now finds itself. President Wilson and his advisers have failed to move Huerta by moral suasion and are now face to face with the unpleasant duty of being obliged to decide upon a course of action for his elimination by some other means.

Evidence gathered from many sources indicate that President Wilson still is determined to avail himself of every possible expedient before turning to actual intervention by United States troops. It seems certain now that he also will try other lines of action before suggesting even the lifting of the embargo on arms and ammunition along the Mexican border.

The president's sole hope before resorting to either of these two expedients seems to be a possible acquiescence in this government's policy by all the European powers and a shutting off at the source of all financial supplies for the Mexican dictator. If this can be brought about administration officials believe that Huerta will be obliged to yield.

Conferences that Secretary of State Bryan has been holding for two or three days with representatives of foreign governments lends strength to the belief that this government has hopes in this direction. Secretary Bryan is bitterly opposed to the idea of lifting the embargo on arms along the Mexican border. In his talk with members of the senate committee Mr. Bryan has contended that such an act was not to be thought of in this age of enlightenment.

President Wilson's friends have made it clear that the president believes the utmost self-restraint ought to be exercised on the part of the public in the present situation. What the administration asks for now on the part of the public is forbearance and restraint and faith in its ability and prudence to conduct the present delicate negotiations to a conclusion.

WON OVER TO OUR VIEW

Material Change in Feelings of Diplomats in Mexico.

Mexico City, Nov. 11.—John Lind, President Wilson's special envoy, has had several conferences in the last two days with Sir Lionel Carden, the British minister, and it is stated that the latter has materially changed his views and has been won over to the view of the situation here which is held by the Washington administration.

It is indeed believed that all members of the diplomatic corps have now the same opinion, although they permit the impression to be spread that they are not in favor of the Washington policy, so as to preserve the popularity they enjoy here owing to their ostensible support of Huerta's stand against the United States.

ACT OF A FRENZIED WOMAN

Prominent Kentucky Club Woman Kills Son and Herself.

Richmond, Ky., Nov. 11.—Mrs. Benjamin L. Banks, one of the most prominent women of Kentucky, shot and killed her only child, a boy, aged twelve years, then blew out her own brains at her home in this city. The tragedy followed the receipt of news announcing the sudden death from pneumonia of her husband in Adair county, where he had been visiting his parents. Mrs. Banks was formerly secretary of the State Federation of Women's clubs.

Sir Vansittart Bowater has been installed as lord mayor of London.

"There are already more than enough women in California to fill every position now open or which might be created as a result of the exposition," writes the secretary of the association.
